Make New Friends; Keep the Old.

Make new friends, but keep the old, Those are silver, these are gold; New-made friendships, like new wine, Are still mellow and refine. Friendships that have stood the test—Time and change—are surely best; Brow may wrinkle, hair grow gray, Friendship never knows decay. For 'mid old friends, tried and true, Once more we our youth renew. But old friends, alas! may die, New friends must their place supply, Cherish friendship in your breast, New is good, but old is best; Make new friends, but keep the old, Those are silver, these are gold. —Exchange.

Ex-Senator Gwin's Death.

William M. Gwin, of California, after a lingering illness, died on the 3d of September at the New York hotel, in that city. He was born in Sumner county, Tenn., Oct. 9, 1805. His life was a varied one and it is possible that no man living to-day passed through so much of political turmoil as Dr. Gwin, by which title he was familiarly called. He was graduated at Transylvania University, Lexington, Ky., and studied medicine. During Andrew Jackson's administration he gained the confidence of the President to a greater degree than anybody else. In 1833 President Jackson appointed Dr. Gwin United States Marshal for Mississippi, in which capacity he served until elected a member of Congress from that State in the years 1841 and 1843. He was made Commissioner of Public Buildings to superintend the erection of the Custom-House in New Orleans in 1847. In the latter part of 1848, being seized with the gold fever, he emigrated to California and was a member of the convention held at San Jose which formed the Constitution of that State.

When California was admitted into the Union, in 1850, Dr. Gwin was elected one of the first Senators from that State and was re-elected in 1856 for a term of five years. During the campaign incident to his election his colleague was David Broderick. Opposed in politics, they were good friends until the second term, when a bitter controversy sprang up between the two men. David Terry was then Chief Justice of California and an ardent champion of Senator Gwin. The acrimony of the contest is supposed to have brought about the famous duel between Terry and Broderick in which the latter lost his life.

In 1861 his secession sentiments were so pronounced and open that Secretary of State, William H. Seward, caused him to be arrested and confined until 1863. Released in 1865, Senator Gwin organized a colonization scheme in San Francisco for the purpose of taking up land in Sonora, Mexico, and having collected quite a number of sympathizers with the Confederacy started for the promised land. There Senator Gwin, by his eminent abilities, attracted the attention of Prince Maximilian, who conferred on him the title of Duke of Sonora, by which he has been known ever since. But the colonization scheme did not prosper and Maximilian being dead the newly created Duke returned to San Francisco in 1867.

The Bible in Italy.

Among the things that thirty-five years ago went to make up the crime of high treason in Italy was the possession of a Bible, which was in the list of revolutionary and forbidden books, and for a man to own it was to subject him to prison, the galleys, and even to death. Now Bible depots are established in every Italian city, and itinerant vendors circulate the book freely. In a conspicuous store in the Corso, Rome, a whole window is filled with copies of the Italian version of the Scriptures. The New Testament can be purchased for five cents, and a separate Gospel for two.

A Texas gentleman and a plain American were discussing the usual subject in glasses. They were naturally inclined to elaborate on the subject of drinking. "Did you ever," asked the plain American, "did you ever suffer from a raging thirst?" "Did I ever? I have, sir. Riding from San Antonio to Pablo on one occasion I was so raging thirsty that I drank a whole bottle of furniture polish all to myself." "You did? And was there no water?" "Water, sir—water! What time has a man suffering from a raging thirst to think of personal cleanliness?"—San Francisco Sunday Chronicle.

By the assessment returns Yavapai county has 10,000 horses, 800 mules, 53,500 sheep and 89,688 head of cattle.

The Sexes.

The Hebrew women are the longest lived and the colored men the shortest. It appears from the gathered statistics of the world that women have a greater tenacity of life than men. Nature worships the female in all its varieties. Among insects the male perishes at a relatively earlier period. In plants the semi-nate blossoms die earliest, and are produced in the weaker limbs.—Female quadrupeds have greater endurance than males. In the human race, despite the intellectual and physical strength of the man, the woman endures longest, and will bear pain to which the strong man succumbs. Zymotic diseases are more fatal to males, and more male children die than female. Deverga asserts that the proportion dying suddenly is about 100 women to 700 men; 1080 men in the United States, in 1870, committed suicide to 285 women. Intemperance, apoplexy, gout, hydrocephalus, affections of heart or liver, scrofula, paralysis, are far more fatal to males than females. Pulmonary consumption, on the other hand, is more deadly to the latter. Females in cities are more prone to consumption than in the country. All old countries not disturbed by emigration have a majority of females in the population. In royal families the statistics show more daughters than sons. The Hebrew woman is exceptionally long lived; the colored man exceptionally short lived. The married state is favorable to prolongation of life among women. Dr. Hough remarks that there are from two to six per cent more males born than females, yet there are more than six per cent of females in the living populations, from which statistics we conclude that all women who can possibly obtain one of these rapidly departing men ought to marry, and that as men are likely to become very scarce, they cannot be sufficiently prized by the other sex.

Modern Greeks in London.

The modern Greeks in London are just now presenting a most edifying spectacle. They are proving to the world that the domestic virtues—and especially the chief one, marital fidelity—still flourishes among them. While the Divorce Court is overwhelmed with petitions for the dissolution of the marriage ties subsisting between couples who bear names that are undoubtedly Anglo-Saxon, the members of the Hellenic community settled in this country, on discovering that the matrimonial unions which many of them had contracted in London in accordance with the ritual and the usages of the Greek Church were null and void in the eyes of the English law, hastened as a body to promote the passage of a bill in the British Parliament for legalizing such marriages; and they are now beginning to take advantage of that measure. Mr. and Mrs. Zarifi have taken the lead in this laudable course, and on their mutual petition obtained a decree establishing the legality of their marriage, which was originally contracted in 1855. What a pleasant contrast this incident presents to the conduct of those young and comparatively newly-married couples who are daily pressing into the divorce court for a diametrically contrary purpose! The Greeks certainly contrast favorably with the English in the use they make of the Divorce Court.

A Timely Interruption.

New York Sun: "Has any one ever proposed to you before?" he asked tenderly after the important question had been put and satisfactorily answered.

"George Simpson came very near it only last night," she replied shyly. "He was just on the point of asking me to be his wife when mamma came into the parlor.—But I am very glad she did," went on the girl earnestly; "I don't think I would have been happy with George."

The death roll of the cholera in Spain passed 80,000 last week, and the daily average is still above 1000. A grim superstition causes uneasiness in Southern Germany just at this time; the rooks in the spires at Ratisbon cathedral have disappeared, a previous departure having been followed by a cholera plague.

The Wilcox Stockman gives it as a report that Gen. D. K. Wardwell, of Cochise county, has been appointed postmaster at Tombstone.

Using Salt to Keep Flies Away.

Pittsburg Chronicle: "What's that for?" asked a customer of a waiter in a Smithfield street restaurant.

The waiter had a bag of table salt in his hand and was sprinkling the contents behind the counter and on the floor where the crumbs might fall.

"It is to keep the flies away," replied the waiter.

"How does
